We have been really enjoying our new art and DT curriculum. We have been creating sets linked to our class text 'The Jamie Drake Equation'. At the moment we are planning our sets.

We have been using pastels to generate our colour ideas. We will share our completed designs next month.

We launched our Space unit with a visit from Dr Matt, an astronomer from the University of Cambridge Institute of Astronomy. Dr. Matt brought a meteorite to show us. We were amazed by how heavy it was.

We have been learning about the Solar System, Earth's orbit and phases of the moon. Take some time to take us outside and look at the stars. We would love to share our learning with you.

In English, we have been off on an adventure. We took ourselves into Space to learn about the features of an adventure story. We thoroughly enjoyed writing our stories. Have a look at an extract from Nadav's below.

Early in the morning, Leo was on his way to greaves. The morning sun was shining like a glitter, blindingly bright. The car was with a red glass. The hot air blew and hummed. Leo was with a windy breeze. As they arrived at greaves, he sat out and dad went out and drove away. As I came in greaves, I sat down. I'll make lunch. Bored and boiled, I lay down on the sofa, looking around for no one to play with. The boring game just placed there. Go do something, I called greaves. He said, do not do that.

That when I saw, he saw it the a glowing controller on the shelf. I looked at it. The controller had a purple space color with lots of planets and cool galaxies embedded on it. I realised I could reach that high so I got a climb. Climbing over walls, I could barely reach it. I got to the top right when I got it. The shelf started to shake. I was losing balance, right when I was about to fall, I grabbed the controller and fell down. I had gotten it.
